"Every ex-service man a Legionnsire" is the slogan for the American Lexion in the department of Oklahoma which has just been announced by the new department commander, J. F. Hatcher. And if he is as successful in translating that slogan into reality as he has been in his educational work, Oklahoma is going to have more Leclonunires by the end of 1925 than ever before.

The new commander, born and reared on an Oklahoma farm, gradusted from Central Teachers' college at Edmond, Okla., and from the Univerdty of Oklahoma and the University of Florida. Humble Socket Is Important to Set Attachment 'Should Be Made of Best Material -Contact Springs.

The humble socket, used to hold the encuum tube and to provide the means of making an electrical contact between the prongs of the tube and the rest of the circuit, receives less attention from the radio fan than it should.

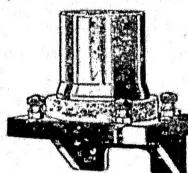

The socket should be carefully scrutinized, for it is at this point that the plate and grid wires and finment leads come very close to each other. If the socket is made of poor insulating material these currents will leak across the base between the blading posts, and become lost. The volume and distance of the receiver will suffer Nothing less than bakelite should be

Do not accept a socket made of material that can be easily cut with a kulfe, or will leave a black mark when rubbed across a piece of white paper. Material that will do this has lampblack in it, which is a very poor insulating substance. As a rule this class of material will melt under the beat of a soldering Iron.

Of next importance are the contact springs. Poor contact springs cause : great deal of the noise that is attribwend to static. Due to the short distance available on the inside of a socket, and the need for keeping the dimensions of the socket as small as possible, the contact spring must necessarily be short. Due to the shortness of the spring, most of the sorsers at present are unsatisfactory, because the springs become permanently bent, Hirawers' Association. This requires frequent bending back into their former mosition so that a good contact our by obtained with the proper of the tube.

One unnufacturer has esteed this problem by author the spring imper. I then bending the tip of the spring on different phases of Moine agriculture. backwards and upwards. This climinates the chort teverage on the spring. Springs are made of phosphor bronzs and always keep a firm upward pressure against the tube prong.

The chief objection to this method is that if you use screws to hold the socket down to the baseboard, or use bus bar wiring to the binding posts, the socket is mechanically connected to the baseboard, and the rubber support does not help a great deal in reducing noises.

A new type of socket has appeared on the market, which overcomes this difficulty. The socket is made of two pleces of molded bakelite. Un one place is mounted the binding pasts and a pad of soft spongy rubber is glaed on in the center. The shell of the socket contains the contact springs and this is glord to the top of the rubber pad. Connections are made from the binding posts to the contact springs by flexible stranded wire leads under neath the shell of the base. These wire teach are "dead" as far as vibrations! are concerned and the tales is therefore completely floated.

ANNUAL FARMERS' WEEK

March 31, April 1, 2 and 3, have been set as the dates for the Nineteenth Annual Farmers' Week at the College of Agriculture, Orono. At that time, several hundred men and women from rural Maine re expected to meet and discuss the problems of agriculture and home making.

The Maine Central and the Bangor & Aroostook Railways are offering reduced Saturday. rates of fare and a half for round trip tickets from all points on their lines, to Bangor, Orono or Old Town. These tickels are good going March 30 and 31 and April 1, 2 and 3 and good returning until midnight, April 4. Arrangements have been made with the University authorities for the use of college dormitories in accommodating men and women attending Farmers' Week. The women will stay in Balentine Hall, one section of which will be reserved for husbands and wives while other men will be accommodated in Oak Hall. Meals will be served in Balentine and Hamibal Hamlin Halls.

In addition to the regular agriculturnl and home economies sessions there will be special meetings and programs of the following organizations: Maine Federation of Agricultural Association, Maine Federation of Farm Bureau, Maine Livestock Breeders' Association. Maine Holstoin-Presian Breeders' Association, the Maine Jersey Breaders Association, the Maine Ayrabire Breed ers' Association, the Guernsey Association, the Maine Beekeepers' Association, the Maine Pomological Society, the Maine Seed Improvement Association and the Maine Sheep and Wool

Synopsis

PART L—Living in the small Engnsh vilings of Darbury, old-fashioned and scalate Diace. Barbara Succelley, daughter of a widowed mother, is soon to celebrate her marriage to Hugh Rochdaic, rich and well connected.
Barbara is adventurous, and has planned, with an aunt, an airplane trip to Australia. Major Alan Croft, famous as un aviator, is to be the pilot.
At her first meeting with Croft Barbara is attracted by his manner and conversation, different from the cutand-dried conventions of her small

They set out, Barbara, her aunt, Croft, and a mechanician. Word in a few days comes to Darbury that the plane is missing and its occupants be-

Dawn broke at last, the first dull lines of gray merging late a myriad penrly tints. Birds awoke in the forest; rustled amid the leaves; shock their wings; then flew forth to hunt for breakfast; their brilliant plumage reflected the sun's rays in a thousand bright hues as they flashed from beneath the shadowy trees.

Upon the sloping shore of a tiny core, the waters of the Ingoon Inpped in a gentle, rippling murmur. Farther away, the sarf of the open sea becaused like distant thumber against the bar rier reef; waves swirled angrily through the gap width formed an

Partly telescoped upon a jagged promontory jutting inland from the entrance, rising and falling helplessly st the mercy of the tide familing through, loomed a mass of something dark. It looked strange, shapeless, forlarnly tracks, as it flung down by a ruthless hand and forgotten.

Upon the ground of the opposite cove, hear a heap of wet coats, little rivulets trickling from her drenched garments, lay the Inert form of a girl A man, likewise sodden from head to foot, knelt beside her, auxiously forcing brandy between her pale lips from a small pocket-flask. Presently be paused, a sudden dread in his heart, and with his head close to her wet blouse, listened. . . . Then, with renewed energy, he set vigorously to work again.

At last she gave a little quivering sigh. Her hands moved grapingly. Boon, with another, longer sigh, she opened her eyes and gazed blankly, as one newly awakened from a troubled dream, into his face. Balsing a hand to her head, the vacant gaze changed to one of feeble wonder.

"Why, are you-hurt?" she half whispered.

Until then he had not recognized that the stream trickling down his face was blood. With his fingers he traced what was apparently a long lagged cut stretching from his temple to the left ear: It smarted when touched Taking the wet handkerchief from his pocket, he sat back and dabbed at it with the clumsy movements of a man unased to troubling over personal injuries. "For heaven's sake, don't talk or go raving mad if we do!"

The words and tone acted as a tonic. Something of her first feeling of inferiority in his presence returned, causing her to struggle flereely against the weakness that threatened to overcome her.

iny there alone, sobbing weakly. . . From the top of the hill Croft scanned what was visible of the land along the north, east and west coasts. This was, he concluded, an island of volcanie origin, with the exceptionally high reef more or less surrounding it, sometimes at a considerable distance from, and sometimes fairly near, the shore. He surveyed the view critically, a purpose forming in his mind, The gradient inland culminated in a Croft harried in its direction. It consisted of one small room. The bamboo walls were intact, but the thatch forming the roof showed large rents; on the ground within, amid musty, dead leaves, were scattered utensils similar to those which they had already seen.

Croft glanced round critically, then at the girl, who had followed him, then out through the opening seaward.

"We can make this sufficiently habltable to carry on with," he observed. His words went out into silence. They brought instantly a vivid realization of the immediate present to her mind, followed quickly by thoughts of the future. A new fear shot up, clutching her heart with a horelile, clammy hand. She looked with sudden dread at her companion's profile; and something about his tense lips seemed to confirm the awful foreboding.
